Paletta will reach out to representatives of the many industries served by geoAMPS

Anthony Paletta has been promoted to Business Development Specialist at geoAMPS. In his new position, Anthony will work closely with industry representatives to help meet their organization's needs through geoAMPS products and services.

His previous work in Product Support for geoAMPS provides him with unique insight into the needs of geoAMPS' clients and knowledge of how geoAMPS products and services can meet those needs.

"I am pleased that Anthony has joined our Business Development Team," Yogesh Khandelwal, President and Chief Executive Officer of geoAMPS, said. "Anthony's background and skills will advance geoAMPS' reputation as a strong technology partner for organizations that are leaders in their respective industries."

Anthony came to geoAMPS after working as Project Manager at SecureState, based in Cleveland, where he managed project plan layout, scheduling, budgets and client communications. Prior to that, he worked at Tucker Ellis, LLP, as Case Assistant of Medical Pharmaceutical Litigation.

He completed a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science at Baldwin-Wallace College in Berea, OH. He also studied Marketing and Graphic Design at Cuyahoga Community College in Cleveland.

"I am very excited about this outstanding opportunity to take my passion for working with customers to the next level," Anthony said. "I look forward to reaching out to the many industries we serve to help our clients meet their project and organizational goals."

"geoAMPS is a growing company that is pushing industries forward through innovation, communication and outstanding customer service."

geoAMPS is a technology company in the Columbus, OH, area that specializes in software solutions to manage land rights and infrastructure assets. For more information, visit www.geoamps.com, call 614-389-4871 or connect with us on one of geoAMPS' social media channels.
